The Owsboro Monitor has just entered upon a new volume. The Monitor well deserves the success it has achieved. It is a useful paper. It is vigorous, sensible, and patriotic. It has done excellent service to the Union cause in Kentucky. We rejoice in the Monitor's present prosperity, and heartily wish it greater prosperity in the future.

THE SPEAKERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—We take the following article from "The New York Journal of Commerce":

KENTUCKY.—The controversy which is going on between various parties about the result of the Kentucky election is one of the most amusing and various in our country's history. The radicals are especially puzzled to know what to make of it. When martial law was declared in the city of Louisville, the rebels were taken to the city, and the city was placed under martial law. The radicals are especially puzzled to know what to make of it. When martial law was declared in the city of Louisville, the rebels were taken to the city, and the city was placed under martial law.

Upon this point, we certainly shall not be deceived. We agree with the Monitor. We agree with our Democratic contemporaries. An excellent Speaker of the House might indeed be selected from the Kentucky delegation. And we are sure we shall be pardoned on all sides if we venture to name the member whom we deem particularly suited to the station. We therefore venture to name the member whom we deem particularly suited to the station. We therefore venture to name the member whom we deem particularly suited to the station.

The Southern country is left, by our recent successes, in just such a condition as gives the greatest opportunities to a daring and enterprising commander of a large mounted force. It is a condition which makes it possible to-day a corps of thirty or forty thousand mounted infantry, Generals Rosecrans and Grant might piece to the very heart of the South, and by destroying railroads, supply depots, and material of war everywhere, do the rebels incalculable injury, with but small loss to our own forces.

Such a force could be raised without difficulty, and in a short time. Almost all Western men can ride; and a few weeks would sufficiently train them and their horses to act safely and effectively against the enemy in their new capacity. The military authorities do not doubt the great importance of keeping up the effect of the recent successes. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports.

We understand General Rosecrans's present mission to Washington relates to the organization of an effective body of troops of this description. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports. The dispatches of the war are full of such reports.

There is accordingly an excellent prospect that a splendid body of mounted infantry will be put into the field and a great leader at a very early date. The earlier the better. We are glad to see that the New York Herald from Morris Island, "when once brought into position, is the best of the Monitor here." The Herald has his own proof against the best of the Monitor here. The Herald has his own proof against the best of the Monitor here.

There is surely no mistaking this explicit language. The Herald is making it plain that it is in the position of the Republican party. The language is indeed levelled straight at the position of the Republican party. The language is indeed levelled straight at the position of the Republican party.

The Republican Cass occupies essentially the same position that our lamented Critchfield occupied. He is a Union Democrat, not a Republican Democrat. He is a Union Democrat, not a Republican Democrat. He is a Union Democrat, not a Republican Democrat.

There are two principal divisions of the people in the loyal States. One is the radical party; the other is the conservative party. The principles and measures of the present administration constitute the basis of the conservative party. The principles and measures of the present administration constitute the basis of the conservative party.

The special value of mounted infantry in the present stage of the war appears to us very plain. It has been recognized for some time by our commanders in the field. Gen. Rosecrans, as a New York contemporary truly says, many months ago proposed and urged the formation of a numerous corps of mounted infantry as perhaps the most efficient force for employment in the South. When he first began active operations in Tennessee he was much troubled by the attacks of rebel cavalry upon his trains and communications. Any less determined man than he would have lost the battle of Murfreesboro simply through alarm at the force of cavalry, under Wheeler and others, which swept down upon his trains the moment our troops met the enemy on the Stone River, and persistently continued to harass them, to interrupt our communications, and to capture and destroy supplies of all kinds, during the whole three days of the battle.

The obstinate gallantry of the small force which Gen. Rosecrans was able to spare for a rear guard, and the undiminished courage and great heart of Rosecrans himself, backed by his able associates in command, saved us from a disastrous defeat on that occasion; and since then it has been noticed that the rebel cavalry has not troubled the Army of the Cumberland much. The reason of this is that the first acts of its commander after the great battle was two weeks to make after the great battle was two weeks to make after the great battle was two weeks to make.

The valuable qualities shown by the Western infantry, when mounted, point to other and more extensive operations which a great force could especially make. A great force could especially make. A great force could especially make. A great force could especially make.

MEXICO.—We are unwilling to believe the reports that come by way of Acapulco and San Francisco concerning the conduct of the French conquering general in Mexico. That there have been harsh and severe measures at times cannot be doubted. In a captured city, where a large portion of the population is hostile to the conquerors, such measures must be adopted, and we have found out during our own experience of civil war. Severity is often a military necessity, but cruelty never is. Our generals in command in captured cities have not gone beyond the common practice in time of war, although our enemies pretend that they have. We doubt, also, whether the French generals have exceeded what is customary under similar circumstances. The wanton war upon Mexico has had enough in itself, and there is no need of inventing stories of atrocities to make it more detestable. It cannot be true that the French and the government are daily imprisoning and shooting those who refuse to take the oath of allegiance to the Empire. It cannot be true that Mexican rebels are publicly flogged for refusing to supply quarters to French officers. Nor can we credit the horrible story of a lady's having received two hundred lashes for the injury, General Forey refusing to excuse her, even when her husband offered "her weight in silver" to save her. These stories sound monstrous, and they need confirmation. They need confirmation. They need confirmation.

The valuable qualities shown by the Western infantry, when mounted, point to other and more extensive operations which a great force could especially make. A great force could especially make. A great force could especially make. A great force could especially make.
